

In looking at family court and court-connected corporations, and how they operate, in protection of public interest, a basic sense of numbers here is NOT optional.

Remember the concepts of income/out go, and assets/liabilities in individual entities (private or government) matters AND, with this, an understanding that someone's revenue is someone else's expense (and vice versa). One organization's "assets" are someone else's liabilities. Functional adults understand this personally or go hungry or homeless, or dependent on others, which also means, controlled by them. Sooner or later they have to pay bills.

lin·go

/ˈlɪŋɡoʊ/

noun informal humorous

a foreign language or local dialect.

"they were unable to speak a word of the local lingo"

synonyms: language, tongue, dialect; More

• the vocabulary or jargon of a particular subject or group of people.

"fat, known in medical lingo as adipose tissue"

synonyms: language, tongue, dialect; More

(from Dictionary.com)

Why, then go "brain-dead" or "I'm too busy to consider it" or any other number of excuses, when the income/revenue, assets/liabilities are just recorded differently, are much larger (collectively) and involve actually identifying the To/From in the public/private partnerships about which we are constantly told and "sold" as essential – or told should be cut due to BUDGET deficits – when it comes to public (government) entities dealing with private ones, and with private (so-called) individual citizens?

Not for all, but for many, I believe it's simply just not as entertaining and is "post-poned gratification" that won't maintain or acquire social status, inclusion, or such. We are not usually paid be curious about such things, but plenty of others, evidently are paid to ensure we don't get too curious about them, or start learning the lingo – the "vocabulary or dialect of a particular subject or group of people."